

1 Operating Agreement was agreed upon and none was signed by the three parties who I had 2 believed were going to sign it.

3 8. It is not common, though it does happen that sometimes, in my experience, one 4 person will start a limited liability company and it will be filed with the view that the various 5 proposed members are going to actually agree on an Operating Agreement but then they fail to do
6 so and the LLC is then subsequently cancelled; that is precisely what occurred in this case.

7 I declare, under penalty of perjury, under the laws of the United States of America, that the 8 foregoing is true and correct. Executed on July 24, 2008 in Truckee, California
